JOURNEYS WITH GREAT CONDUCTORS

So what do great conductors do? The answer lies in those cosmic performances, where, in a truly alchemical transformation of elements, something is achieved that goes beyond the composer, the players, and the soloists, and we are transfixed by the musical energy that is created on stage. Great conductors don't create concerts that just happen to you, they draw you in to performances where you are an active, essential part of it.

Experience a concert in the LSO's 2014/15 series, and let some of the world's greatest conductors take you on a musical journey like no other. In October and June, Bernard Haitink, a musician with a weight of authority, experience and insight behind him, conducts symphonies by Bruckner, Beethoven and Brahms. Over the season, Sir Simon Rattle will join the Orchestra for a series of concerts exploring everything from Romantic oratorio and 20th-century masterpieces to a brand new children's opera. And we'll have visits from two figures who, as former Principal Conductors, are an integral part of the LSO's history and identity – Conductor Laureate André Previn and Principal Guest Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas, who celebrates his 70th birthday with a special gala concert in March.

'The impact of Sunday night's concert, conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas, pinned one back by the ears.'

Principal Conductor's Series

HEARTLAND OF RUSSIA

2014/15 sees Valery Gergiev undertake his final complete London season with the LSO as the Orchestra's 15th Principal Conductor; he will continue in the role until the end of 2015. The past eight years with Gergiev has included series exploring best-loved and little-known works by Berlioz, Brahms, Szymanowski, Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky, Mahler, Dutilleux, Shchedrin and Prokofiev, and he leaves with a legacy of over 20 LSO Live recordings of his electrifying live concerts at the Barbican.

This season, Gergiev's tenure reaches its hotly anticipated dénouement: a return to iconic repertoire from his homeland. Comprising five all-Russian programmes, his 2014/15 series also incorporates the powerhouse Siberian pianist Denis Matsuev's UBS Soundscapes: LSO Artist Portrait. Hailed as the 'new Horowitz', Matsuev returns to the Barbican to perform Prokofiev's Piano Concerto No 3, Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No 2 and Rachmaninov's Piano Concerto No 2 with our outgoing Principal Conductor – a unique opportunity to witness a partnership between two pre-eminent Russian musicians. With these magnificent piano works featuring alongside symphonies by Prokofiev, Shostakovich and Rachmaninov, together with the violin concertos of Glazunov and Tchaikovsky, this concert series promises to be a perfect storm of Russian drama.

Russophiles, take note: with the most authentic performances of Russian music this side of the Baltic, there's only one place to be next season.

TWELVE VIOLIN SUPERSTARS

From Easter until the end of summer in 2015, the LSO has assembled twelve of the world's greatest violinists for an International Violin Festival at the Barbican, alongside our own wonderful string talent. With concertos spanning the classical masters (Mozart and Beethoven) right through to the 20th century's finest (Britten, Bartók, Szymanowski) – this Festival is an experience that will be etched in the LSO's history for many decades to come.

Amongst those joining the LSO on stage are regulars to the Orchestra, Leonidas Kavakos and Anne-Sophie Mutter (who have both held LSO Artist Portrait series in the past few years), Janine Jansen, and Nikolaj Znaider (who you can also see conduct the LSO earlier in the season) among others; an opportunity to see the LSO's leader Roman Simovic direct the LSO String Ensemble, and we welcome Joshua Bell to give a fitting end to the Festival in the final concert on 28 June.

'The evening's triumph was Joshua Bell, beautifully accompanied by the LSO. His attention to detail, and the value he gave every note and phrase had one transfixed.'

LSO Sing

GETTING THE CITY INTO SONG

LSO Sing, the LSO's choral strategy, is about getting to the core of all music-making: singing! Group singing is one of the most awe-inspiring things you can witness as an audience member, and can be transformational for those taking part. With the LSO's comprehensive programme of singing events, you can do both, whether you're a choral connoisseur, seasoned professional or new starter.

In its second season, the LSO Sing programme has grown and LSO Choral Director Simon Halsey will also be your guide in five LSO Singing Days (see page 17), where you can join in and explore a classic choral work under a world-class conductor, or, for anyone new to singing, pieces from Bach to the Beatles and more.

LSO Sing is about much more than attending concerts: In Simon Halsey's words, 'we want everyone in the City to sing!'. The sheer enjoyment of it is reason enough; moreover, singing is good for you – recent research shows that singing can dramatically increase wellbeing and happiness, and, best of all, it doesn't cost a penny.

So come to a choral concert, take part in a singing day. How you do it is up to you, but make sure to be a part of LSO Sing in 2014/15.

British Conductors

HOME-GROWN CONDUCTING TALENT

In 2014/15, the LSO will be welcoming the best in home-grown conducting talent to the podium, with visits from six of Britain's finest and most inspiring maestros. The diverse line-up spans multiple generations of conductors, and will bring a striking mix of repertoire to the Barbican stage.

The series includes return appearances by revered conducting icons and long-standing friends of the LSO. Sir John Eliot Gardiner continues his ongoing exploration of Mendelssohn and Schumann; Sir Antonio Pappano returns for two concerts focusing on evocative orchestral music; Sir Mark Elder conducts a programme of quintessentially

Romantic works; and Sir Simon Rattle leads four performances throughout the season, two choral and two orchestral.

Two members of a younger generation of British conductors, both mentored and supported by Sir Simon Rattle at the start of their careers, are also set to bring their musical visions to the LSO. In January, Robin Ticciati leads a programme of Ravel, Mahler and Japanese composer Toshio Hosokawa, and throughout the season LSO Principal Guest Conductor Daniel Harding will explore some of the cornerstones of Romantic music, from Brahms to Mahler.
